That bomb-throwing in a Barcelona theatre has sent a shiver around the world. It is almost incredible that human beings can live in a civilized state and yet hold to a philosophy which fustifies the downright and random murder of men, women and children.

New York City has not, theatrically considered, gone wholly to the vaudeville logs. It was ready with a hearty and healthy wecome to Irving and Miss Terry in the most legitimate style of drama. We know that the general cry is, "Hard times," but not all the people are suffering; some have sufficient, and can spare a little for the half-starved, half-clad tots of the tenements. Let us make up our minds that the children who are always in the midst of hard times shall not know anything of the bitterness of these passing hard times. A few pennies will lift their Christmas out of the gloom of misery into the brightness of a goiden joy. Let us make this year's Christmas tree so big and beautiful and bountiful.

Napoleon's Bad Table Manners.

The great Napoleon Bonaparte had lisgusting table manners. Burlenne, his secretary, and Sir George Cockburn, Admiral of the vessel that carried him to St. Helena, confirm other authorities who described him as eating with his fingers. He was a small eater, getting the nourishment his system required from milk and wine rather than solid foods. He rarely ever used his knife, we are told, and instead of picking up the morsels of food with a fork or spoon he dipped his fingers in his plate and picked up bits that dripped sauce or gravy on his waistcoat.
